Background: Child Welfare Housing Assistance Program. The purpose of the Child Welfare Housing Assistance Program (Program) is to reduce the need for foster care placement and to shorten the time children remain in out-of-home care when placement is necessary by provide housing vouchers, rental assistance, navigation, and other support services to eligible families. DCYF administers the Program, in one or more counties in Eastern and Western Washington, within funds appropriated for this specific purpose. The Program was initially created as a pilot program in 2019 and made permanent in 2023.

Eligibility. The following families are eligible for assistance from the Program:

- a parent with a child who is dependent and a lack of appropriate housing is a remaining barrier to reunification; and
- a parent of a child who is a candidate for foster care and whose housing instability is a barrier to the child remaining in the home.

DCYF contracts with an outside entity or entities who must have a demonstrated understanding of the importance of stable housing for children and families involved, or at risk of being involved, with the child welfare system, to operate the Program.

Annually beginning November 1, 2024, DCYF shall report to the Legislature, at a minimum, when available, the distribution of the Program by race, geography, ethnicity, and gender including a discussion of whether of this distribution is equitable and include any recommendations for legislative changes to the Program.

In Chapter 13.34 RCW, housing assistance means appropriate referrals by DCYF or other agencies to federal, state, local, or private agencies or organizations, assistance with forms, applications, or financial subsidies or other monetary assistance for housing. For purposes of Chapter 13.34 RCW, housing assistance is not a remedial service or family reunification service.

Summary of Bill: DCYF, or entities contracted with DCYF to operate the Program, may continue to provide housing assistance through the Program after DCYF is no longer providing child welfare or child protective services to the family. DCYF is to adopt rules to establish formal procedures for implementation of the Program.

During the 2025-2027 biennium, DCYF shall increase the number of households served by the Program by at least 200 above those served during fiscal year 2025, with a priority on serving families on any wait lists. Beginning July 1, 2027, DCYF shall continue to provide child welfare housing assistance to at least the same number of households as were served during the 2025-2027 biennium.

- home placement, support reunification, provide for program administration, or other purposes; and
- the percentage of funding spent on program administration, rental assistance to families, and supportive services necessary to receive federal housing voucher support.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony:

PRO: Too often children are unnecessarily separated from their families and their parents not because of neglect or abuse but simply because their families can't afford housing. No child should have to grow up away from their family due to financial hardship alone. This bill will take a critical step toward keeping families together by expanding the child welfare housing assistance program by ensuring families receiving housing support through the program can continue to do so even after the child leaves child welfare or protective services. The impact of this program actually saves money for the state over the long term as well because it's very expensive to keep a child in foster care. It is four times more expensive to have a child in foster care than it is to fund this program. In addition to saving the state money, shortening a child's length of time in foster care prevents prolonged trauma which is the most important thing. At its core, this bill recognizes that housing stability is family stability. There are currently 108 families who are on a wait list for housing and the demand continues to grow. State investment in this program leverages federal dollars. Research from the Administrative Office of the Courts shows that 30 percent of out-of-home placements arise or last longer because the family does not have an adequate place to live, and 5 percent of young people aging out of foster care become homeless within three months and within 12 months that number rises to 15 percent.

Housing authorities have partnered with DCYF, with the assistance of the Legislature. Housing organizations have committed to 167 apartments and housing vouchers for DCYF's use when in the judgement of its case worker or dependency court that housing would work for one of three purposes: prevent the need for foster care; shorten the need for foster care; or to house a teenager aging out of foster care or coming out of juvenile rehabilitation who would otherwise start their independent adulthood by becoming homeless. In return, DCYF agreed to provide or arrange for support services for those assisted households to help them find housing and succeed as a tenant. It's expensive, but far cheaper than having a child in out-of-home placement or a teenager being homeless.

By making these services more accessible and long term, we can help prevent unnecessary family separations caused by housing insecurity.

The impact of this program actually serves to save money to the state over the long term as well because it is very expensive to keep a child in foster care by bringing them out—shortening their length of time in the foster care program.
